HUGHES NOT A PUSSY FOOT

THERE is none of the soft, feline velvety, treacherous touch about the Republican presidential nominee. He is a man of character and determination, who entered on the campaign with the solemn purpose of arousing the nation to a sense of the peril that confronts it in the hour of dire distress. There is no personal aggrandizement at stake, for Hughes has had a surfeit of honors and been satiated to an extent that would justify him remaining in retirement to the end of his days. He has never descended to the level of the petty demagogue who has to flatter the smallest creature he meets for the sake of cajoling him into a vote. Hughes always has been a virile figure, who has taken the club frequently in his assaults upon the vested interests. The club is as strong an element of his campaign as it was of that other forceful character, the Rough Rider, but the weapon never was employed ruthlessly but with rare discrimination and determination. From the hour that Mr. Hughes decided to make the race for the presidency he has figured industriously as an iconoclast who has been busy destroying the statutes and false gods raised by the effeminacy of the Wilson administration. Hughes has the courage of his convictions and he is not chary about expressing himself in such a forcible manner that he brought the occupant of the White House to his feet after the delivery of his first speech of the campaign. From the beginning of the present history making tour to the present every stop has brought out a fresh accusation against the Democratic administration. These accusations have not been idle or empty, for in every case where a charge was launched against Mr. Wilson by Mr. Hughes the latter has had the facts at his tongue's end and the documents to sustain what he had to say. Hughes is of the sledge hammer variety of orators who go pounding away like the trip hammer driving home the foundations of the pier that is going to uphold the traffic of a nation. The allegations uttered during the first week of the present trip were sufficient to make the president wince and three days ago he resolved to go over the same ground as Mr. Hughes is covering for the purpose of replying to the great jurist. Yesterday the chief executive of the nation did what he always has done since he took office—he reconsidered this resolution and concluded it would be better to remain at home and watch Congress to prevent the members from escaping the whip he is wielding so effectively in securing appropriations for a great army and navy.

A LIVE NEWS SERVICE

READERS of the Bonanza are invited to compare the telegraph columns of this paper with those of any other paper printed outside the leading centers of the nation where news is distributed over the leased wire system of the Associated Press. With all due modesty the management of the Bonanza affirms that there is no other newspaper in the United States published in a town with ten times the population of Tonopah that can offer a better or more reliable service than what the Bonanza gives its readers six days of the week. For instance, yesterday there was a story containing over 800 words giving the very latest developments in the progress of negotiations for a settlement of the threatened railroad tie-up, dealing with every detail of the conferences conducted by President Wilson. Then there was a report of the new navy, to cost over half a billion dollars and to be completed within the course of the next three years. This story was told in something over 400 words, while on the sixth and seventh columns of the first page appeared the thrilling narrative of the great Russian drive, describing the masterly maneuvers of the Grand Duke Nicholas which promise to bring about the greatest flanking movement known since the memorable days of Sedan when Napoleon III was brought to a realization of the superior generalship of Bismarck and Von Moltke. These are mere incidents of one day's publication which readers of the Bonanza appreciate when they express their desire to have today's news delivered today instead of waiting for a lapse of twenty four hours when the world is waking up for another day's developments. The Bonanza gives the news when it is news, and when you see it in the Bonanza you will know that the integrity of the Associated Press is staked on the accuracy of the reports.

AROMA OF THE TANKS

CERTAIN papers had a good laugh when they thought it was a joke to ridicule the statement that there was danger of infection from the polluted waters of the new high pressure system. Perhaps these writers have altered their opinions since the town trustees accidentally and thoughtlessly permitted the perfumed stream to course right down the main business thoroughfare, where the presence could be distinctly felt. Fortunately a strong breeze was blowing off the desert and the mephitic vapors were transported back to the mountains where they could do no harm. One whiff of this sulphuretted hydrogen was sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the compound stored in the new fire tanks was strong enough to earn the $25,000 reward offered by a Chicago millionaire for the best antidote for infantile paralysis. If the New York child epidemic could withstand one inhalation of that stuff that was permitted to float down the gutters of Main street for the past two days the malady must be worse than anything described in this remote section of the desert, where the officials believe in the old Roman aphorism, "That the smell of gain is good wheresoever it comes." The sincere wish of every taxpayer is that these same county officials do their stint at the outlets of the city tanks that call for the payment of over $17,000 at one fell swoop this season.

What is the necessity for a couple of district attorneys when there is not enough work to keep one busy. Nye county thinks it essential to its welfare to have one full fledged attorney on the payroll and then an assistant, so that when both are not away one can be found at home or somewhere in the county.

Fifteen Years Ago in Tonopah

W. E. Jones was a passenger from Bodie.
J. C. Tognoni, postmaster at Duckwater, arrives.
B. F. Edwards arrives on the stage from Candelaria.
Ranchers near the Reese river finish haying for the season.
G. H. Black, of Kingman, Ariz., came in on the regular stage.
Billy Rodgers, of Smoky Valley, comes to Tonopah and is pleased with such a large population.

Walter Hollis and Wilkes Brougher return from Belmont after spending several days in that camp.
Jules Karsky arrives from Eureka to take a position as clerk in his father's store on Main street.

The hay crop throughout Nye county will fall short one-half, caused by a cold spring and shortage of water.

A. Cahen, manager of M. Karsky, the Eureka drygoods merchant, arrive with two large wagons loaded with drygoods and gents' clothing, making this the first consignment of goods for the new store in this camp.

Reports from Gold Park and vicinity are very promising. There has been several strikes lately which average from $16 to $24 in gold. The ledges are large and wood and water abundant. It is rumored that the Gold Park company contemplates running a tunnel 4000 feet in length which will tap seven ledges at a depth of 500 feet or more lower than the old workings. Gold Park is located in Nye county.

Long claims about six dozen men and the main business is ably conducted by Peter Shields, mayor and chief counsellor, with the aid of J. B. Schrader, a San Franciscan, who is there looking after the mining interests of the late J. D. Phelps estate in Lodi Valley.

J. A. Schweiger, of Bodie, arrives on a visit from Klondike.
Harry Ramsey bonds his well, three miles north, to T. L. Oddie for $1400.

D. H. Porter, a solid merchant of Ballarat, arrives, intending to locate in business.

Oddie, Phely and Peters move their sorting floor to a new location. A new ledge containing highgrade is found after the removal, causing the owners a pleasant surprise.
